The Strange Story of a Hidden Book

PREFACE I.—A STORY.

II.—A HISTORY:—

Pandit Dhanaraja.—Extracts from the Prashnottara.—Pandit Parmeshri Das' Narrative.—Pandit Dhanaraj'a's Biography.—List of Important Sanskrit Works mentioned by Pandit Dhanaraja.—Personal Narrative in connexion with the Pranava-Vada.

III.—THE GENUINENESS OF THE WORK.

IV.—THE NATURE OF THE PRANAVA-VADA.

V.—THE MANNER OF THE BOOK.

VI.—THE NATURE OF THE PRESENT TRANSLATION AND SUMMARY.

VII.—PRELIMINARY NOTE ON SYSTEM OF TRANSLITERATION ETC., FOLLOWED HERE.

PREFACE BY GARGYAYANA

SECTION I.—Sanjhi-Prakri-Prakarana.—The Ultimates in their Primal Nature and their Coalescence:—

A as the Self,—U as the Not-Self.—M as the relation of Negation between them.—The tri-unity of the World-process, and the triplicity of every factor of it.—Illustrations.
SECTION II.—Yoga-Prakāra-Prakāraṇa—The Methods of the Conjunction of the Three Factors:—

The importance and the consequences of the knowledge of Brahman as triune.—Further illustrations of the tripli-city.—Cognition, action and desire as corresponding to A, U and M.—The multifarious triplets arising under desire and action.

SECTION III.—Krīyā—Action:—

CHAPTER I.—The Relation of Action to Knowledge, i. e., to the Vedas:—

Action as the fruit of cognition and desire.—Right action possible only after right knowledge and right desire, i.e., after mastery of the four Vedas, Rk, Yajuh, Sāma and Atharva, corresponding to cognition, desire, action and their summation, respectively.—The fourfold subdivision of each Veda into Mantra, Brāhmaṇa, Upanishat and Tantra, by the same correspondence.—The study of all the four Vedas necessary for perfect accomplishment of the four stages of life and the achievement of mokṣa.—The fourfold path to mokṣa.—The four āśramas, governed by the same correspondence.—

Their inner significance.

CHAPTER II.—The Genesis of the Vedas:—

The authors of the Vedas:—The rulers of the worlds.—The world-systems and cycles which they rule.

CHAPTER III.—The Components of the Vedas:—

A résumé.—Preliminary remarks about the nature and mutual relations of the Prapāṇa, the Gāyatrī, the Mahā-vākyas.
and the Vedas.—The fruit of the study of these.

CHAPTER IV.—The Components of the Vedas—

(Continued).

The Gāyatrī and the Mahā-vākyas.—Incidental remarks on the three forms of yaj, and on castes and āshramas.

CHAPTER V.—The Rg-Veda:

The Vedas.—The Rg-Veda.—The nature of its contents.

CHAPTER VI.—Sub-Section i.—The Yajur-Veda.

The Yajur-Veda.—The nature of its contents.—The nature of kriyā.—The relation of action to mokṣha.—The various kinds of mokṣha.

Sub-Section ii.—The Sacrifices Mentioned in the Yajur-Veda:

The significance of various yajñas or sacrifices.—The five daily sacrifices or the pañcha-mahā-yajñas, and the bali-vaišvādeva, the bali-pradāna, and the bali-bhūta.—Aśhya-medha, gū-medha, nāma-medha, ajā-medha and māhiṣa-medha.—Agni-hotra.

Sub-Section iii.—The Sacraments Mentioned in the Yajur-Veda:

The significance of the samskāras or sacraments.—Their dual aspect, conventional, unreal or formal, and real or metaphysical.—The supreme importance of upa-māyana.—The symbolical meaning of certain ceremonial articles connected with brahmacharya.—The sixteen samskāras.
Sub-Section iv.—The sacraments of the Yajur-Veda:

The various samskaras.—1. Implantation of the seed of the body.—2. Invocation of the jiva to inhabit it.—3. Humanisation of both.—4. Bringing to birth and outer manifestation.—5. Assignment of characteristic name.—6. Dressing up and preparing for future work.—7. Determination of specific vocation and outer marking of it.

APPENDIX TO SECTION III by Dr. Louise Appell:

Samskaras.

Sub-Section v.—The sacraments of the Yajur-Veda:

The eighth sacrament, upa-nayana, investiture with the sacred thread.—Study and preparation for future study.

Sub-Section vi.—The sacraments of the Yajur-Veda:

The ninth to the fifteenth sacraments.—
(9) The ‘bath-rite’ closing study.—
(10) Marriage.—(11) The home-coming with the bride.—(13) Parentage.—(14) Progeniture.—(15) Retirement from the household.

Sub-Section vii.—The sacraments of the Yajur-Veda:

The sixteenth sacrament, post-mortem rites.

CHAPTER VII.—Sub-Section i.—The Sama-Veda:

The nature of Shakti-energy in general.—Distinction between Shakti, Ichchhā and Māyā and Brahman.—Māhā Māyā and its sub-divisions, Yoga-māyā, Bhagavatī, Yoga-nidrā.
Sub-Section ii.—The Sāma-Veda:—

Particular forms of Shakti-energy.—
Sarasvati, Lakshmi, Saati.—Their summation in Parama.—Their sub-divisions.

Sub-Section iii.—The Sāma Veda:—

The need to meditate on Necessity.—
The contents of the Sāma-Veda.—Considerations as to variations in the order of succession of cognition, etc.—The significance of devotion and of hymns and singing generally.

CHAPTER VIII.—The Atharva-Veda:—

The Atharva as the summation of the other three Vedas.—The partless unity of the whole appearing as uniformity amidst endless variation and detail of parts.—The realisation of non-separateness the one final goal.—The contents of the Atharva.—Endless successions.—The significance of sat and asat.—Why sat corresponds with kriya, ananda with ichchha, and chit with cognition.—The explanation of the symbology connected with Shiva.—Sat-chit-ānanda and the nerve currents of idā-pingalā-sushumna.—Reproduction of trinity in each.—Endless permutations.—Further contents of the Atharva.

CHAPTER IX.—The Brāhmaṇas:—

The reasons for the name Brāhmaṇa, common to a portion of the scriptures and to a caste.—The general nature and scheme of the contents and the authorship of the Brāhmaṇas.—The mystery of being, the endlessness of details, and their synthesis and unification in the scriptures.—The relation of the various parts of the scriptures, as principle and concrete detail, aphorism and commentary.—The Brāhmaṇas of the Ṛg-Veda.—Those of the Yajur.—Those of the Sāma.—Those of the Atharva.—Opening root-sentences of each of the four.—Recapitulation.—The significance of hymns and prayers.—The allegory of Mahā-Viṣṇu sleeping in the ocean of milk.